OBSERVATIONS

DECORATION DAY—May 30th the day on which decoration day is usually observed will fall this year on Sunday. In some places in the county it will be observed on that day while in others it will observed on the preceding Saturday or the following Monday. The program arranged for the day is always of an educational nature. The decoration of the graves of departed heroes and the marching of the battle scarred veterans is calculated to inspire patriotism in young hearts. The addresses on the occasion are reminiscent and historical and much benefit is derived by those who listen as well as by those who speak. A special feature of the day in most places is the exercises by the children consisting of patriotic recitations and National songs. These exercises are not only entertaining to visitors but patriotism is thus instilled into growing minds from their very infancy. Some years ago decoration day was observed in Springfield each year with a program appropriate to the occasion but of late years the practice has discontinued.

COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL—The new school law provides that "Within two years after the passage and approval of the act, there shall be established by the county board of education of each county, one or more county high schools, Provided, there is not already existing in the county a high school of the first class if such high school already exists, and if the county board may be able to make such an arrangement with the trustees or board of education of said high school as will furnish to the pupils completing the rural school course free tuition in said high school, then said high school may be considered as meeting the purpose of this law, without the establishment by the board of another high school" This law makes it the duty of the board to see to it that there is a high school in the county within the time prescribed by the act, where pupils who have completed the common school course may receive free tuition. It is not a matter that is optional with the board, whether there is such a school provided or not, but the act makes it imperative. They can however, where there is a high school already existing in the county which meets the demands make arrangements with the board of trustees of that school for the attendance of pupils who have completed the common school course. The establishment of a high school would necessitate considerable expenditure of money in making the necessary improvements and providing the necessary teachers. As the number of pupils who complete the common school course, is very small, the need would not justify so great an expense. As there is already a High School of the first class in the county, the most econimical course would be to arrange with the board of the Graded School for the attendance of high school pupils in it. This would also give the best results as the standard of the Graded School is higher than could be hoped for in rural High schools, thus the arrangement with Graded School is the cheaper both from a financial and educational standpoint. The educational qualifications of the teachers in the Springfield Graded School are equal to any in the state, all hold state certificates and most of them hold degress from some well known institution of learning. A high school unless it has the necessary number of qualified teachers exists as such only in name, and is more of a detriment educationally than a benefit. Every school cannot be made a high school, nor can many high schools be established in the county without materially lessening the standard. The union of the entire county in support of one good school, will aid materially in the upbuilding of the educational standard of the county.

Dan Horton Killed.

Dan Horton, aged about 40 years, who has figured in many troubles that have occurred during the past quarter of a century in the section where he lived, met death Saturday afternoon shortly after seven o'clock in the manner that friends had often told him would be his fate. He was shot and instantly killed by his nephew, William Shipp, the 19 year old son of the late Robert Shipp The tragedy occurred at the home of Charles Shipp in Taylor county, about three and a half miles from Finley Will and Charlie Shipp are brothers. The former is unmarried and lived with the later. In the difficulty Will Shipp was seriously cut across the right cheek by Elmer Horton, the fifteen year old son of Dan Horton, who was with his father at the time he met death. From the best information that can be gathered it seems Shipp killed Horton in self defense.

The trouble which terminated in the tragedy Saturday evening began while the two men were in Campbellsville that day. A younger brother and sister of the Shipp boys have been making their home with Horton for somstime past. Saturday Will Shipp met Horton and told him that he had secured a good home for the two children. Horton expressed a willingness to let the girl leave his home, but stated that he would not give up the boy. Shipp insisted, and said that if needs be he would resort to the courts to secure possession of both children. This greatly angered Horton. Horton, it is said, was drinking heavily when he returned home that evening. He had trouble at home, and later, arming himself with a shotgun and accompanied by his son, Elmer, left for the home of Charlie Shipp. Soon after arriving there he encountered Will Shipp, and drawing his gun attemped to shoot him. Shipp however, like a flash drew a 45-Smith & Wesson and fired five times. Death was instantaneous. Elmer Horton who only a short distance away rushed at Shipp with a knife, and in attempting to slash his throat, cut a deep and ugly wound across the cheek. Shipp it is said, ran toward the house to avoid young Horton, and as he did so the boy picked up his father's gun and shot at him.—Lebanon Enterprise.

Painfully Injured

Last Friday while at work on the roof of Mr. Ivo Carney's residence, Mr. John Clements sustained quite a painful accident. A ladder upon which he was standing and which was fastened to the top of the roof, broke loose and Mr. Clements took a slide for terra firma. The fall itself would not probably have resulted in any injury, as the distance from the roof to the ground was only a few feet, but in sliding down the roof his hand came in contact with a piece of tin, and a gash several inches long and very deep was the result His left arm also struck a bundle of tin and a gash almost to the bone resulted, requiring the attention of a physician for several days. While Mr. Clements was unable to work for a few days after the accident, the wounds are healing satisfactorily and he is now able to be at work. —Marion Falcon.

An Appeal for Homeless Children

Now that the warm summer days are almost upon us, it is absolutely necessary to find country homes for the babies who are in the receiving home of the Kentucky Coilbren's Home Society.

Reading our daily papers, that justly expose and denounce the corruption, vice and crime that permeates our municipalities; the lax administration of law; the inadequate punishment of crime, and deeply impressed by the seeming short hours of labor and the supposed easy life of the city, the farmer is not to be blamed if he is a little inclined to believe that "hold-up men" are more numerous than they really are, and that life in the city is altogether a "soft snap" than it really is.

On the other hand, city people reading the alleged wit and seeing the very funny pictures of the bewhiskered farmer in many papers and periodicals, conclude that the farmer never speaks grammatically, and that he knows nothing of history or science; that he spends much of his time signing fake contracts, and all his money in buying plug tobacco. In the city news paper stories the farmer is made to speak a dialect that cannot be heard among any farmers of this country.

The Farmers' Institute is bringing splended business men, whose education has been sadly neglected in agricultural matters, in touch with the scientific investigator and instructors, with the men who are practicing their teachings on the farm, in the work shops, at the desks in the schools. It is encouraging hundreds of young men and women to attend the college of agriculture that they may get hold of the fundamental principles of the business which they expect to make their lifework. The Institute wishes them to know how to do things and why they do them.

Early Maturity In Swine.
This is an exceedingly desirable quality in most animals, but is particularly true in hogs. If the spring pigs can be made to grow rapidly, lay on the right kind of flesh and fat and be marketed in the fall the profit is sure to be considerable. Most of the growth and weight are put on while plenty of pasture is available. This makes it possible to secure gain at a very low figure. Breeds like Poland-China, Essex, Thin Rind, Small Yorkshire, etc., seem to be quite desirable for early maturity.

Farm Wisdom.
The low wheel wagon is a great saving on the farm.
The study of soils is often the first step toward success.
The poor road makes delivery of farm crops expensive.
There is nothing quite equal to gasoline engines for farm power.
Taking care of the fertility of the land is insuring future crops.
In all kinds of farming, profit comes only when we guard against losses.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Corn Will Not Hurt Pigs.
Do not be afraid that field corn will injure hogs. Make it the main feed. But at the same time do not forget that pigs must have some feed containing protein. On the ordinary farm a little wheat bran, ground cowpeas or soy beans will supply the necessary nitrogenous material. Nothing is better than clover pasture. Corn silage is good for a succulent feed, and well cured clover hay will be eaten greedily by growing pigs.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Benefit of Farmers' Institute

Nothing has been a greater drawback to the farmer's progress than the feeling that there is something in his vocation that separated him as a class from the people of other callings. The business and professional men should attend the Farmers' Institute, because anything that assists agriculture will be a benefit to their specialties, and the farmer should want them to attend and assist. Great good comes from the interchange of ideas and the discussion of topics of importance.

In our cities are found wrong notions of the farmers, and on the farms wrong notions about the city people. These notions are often uncomplimentary, and as a result the farmer has an unkind feeling toward, not the city people he knows, but the city people as a class; and it is unfortunate that he may be indifferent to some things that affect the welfare of the city people. And it is especially unfortunate that city people, because of wrong notions of the farmers they do not know, are indifferent and often hostile to the interest of rural communities. The truth is that the interests of the man in the city and the men on the farm are closely interwoven; that which injures the city hurts the farm; that which benefits the farm helps the city.

Reading our daily papers, that justly expose and denounce the corruption, vice and crime that permeates our municipalities; the lax administration of law; the inadequate punishment of crime, and deeply impressed by the seeming short hours of labor and the supposed easy life of the city, the farmer is not to be blamed if he is a little inclined to believe that "hold-up men" are more numerous than they really are, and that life in the city is altogether a "soft snap" than it really is.

On the other hand, city people reading the alleged wit and seeing the very funny pictures of the bewhiskered farmer in many papers and periodicals, conclude that the farmer never speaks grammatically, and that he knows nothing of history or science; that he spends much of his time signing fake contracts, and all his money in buying plug tobacco. The Marion County Leader in its issue of May 20th in one of its numerous editorials, in referring to the NEWS LEADER speaks of it as "Thurman's News-Leader." We regret very much that the Editor of the Marion County Leader has been induced to make such a statement, now because of any effect that it has or might have upon us but for the reason that we do not concede the idea that an editor, while he may enjoy some kind of a license, enjoys that of license or privilege of making statements in utter disregard of the truth. We believe that the editor of a newspaper should always confine himself to the truth, and there can in our judgment, be no more excuse for lying through the press, that there is for lying to our fellow men in the daily walks of life and in matters of business. We think the one as honorable as the other, and on the other hand we think the one as disreputable as the other.

The names of the only Editors and Publishers of the NEWS-LEADER are shown on the second page of every issue of the paper, and we wish to state for the benefit of the Marion County Leader if it is in search of truth, or if it is willing to accept the truth, that Jas. R. Noe and Joseph Polin are the sole editors, publishers and owners, of the NEWS-LEADER. We wish further to say to the Editor of the Marion County Leader that if Judge Thurman was either part owner, editor or publisher of the NEWS-LEADER we would gladly put his name at the head of the column, for we have never yet been engaged in any kind of business, with any man or set of men whose identity we were unwilling to disclose.

The Harrodsburg Herald says "Rev. F. W. Barker, the leading Owsley advocate has declared his intention to stand by Saufley lotly as the nominee. He is a dyed in the wool Democrat and is showing fine judgment."

The example of this Minister, who was a leading local option man is worthy of emulation. It manifests a liberal mind, not willing to proscribe a man because of his views on a subject wholly foreign to politics. It is a source of gratification to Democrats, who have had the welfare of the party at heart regardless of whether its nominees were wet or dry. We have as yet said little in regard to the political race now on. Our fight will be made from a Democratic standpoint regardless of the liquor question which has no place in politics, since it has been settled in Washington by the vote of the people, and if the question ever comes up again it will be settled again by the vote of the people.

Signs of the approach of the fearful catastrophe at Messina had not been obscure. Warning had not been given of the impending danger by abnormal atmospheric conditions. It is true. There had been no electrical tension in the air. But a general distemperature, says the correspondent of the Paris Temps, "exacted on susceptible organizations." All through the day and night before the nervous were peculiarly wrought up. There was a half hour interval on the eve of the original shock when the birds, the dogs and the cattle evinced intense agitation. Horses neighed loudly in their stalls. The howling of the dogs was noticed aboard the ships at anchor.

BASE BALL.—The strong nine from Springfield came out Saturday and played the Litsey team. They came confident of victory and were accompanied by a large crowd of rooters who so often had cheered old Springfield and helped them to win many a fierce battle, but Springfield lost. Springfield that almost invincible team met their Waterloo and at the hands of the Litsey boys. It was the worst drubbing they have had in a minor and to them for many a day, two of their best pitchers were batted all over the field and the entire team seemed as mere children in the hands of the Litsey leagers. Rogers, whose beautiful curls and fine physique reminds one of old "Cy" Young, was first seat in to do the twirling for Springfield. His beautiful curves were soon found but his backers thought he would soon settle down to business, but when the same batters began to face him twice in the first inning the Springfield rooters realized that something must be done Will Kelly and Joe Smith were seen in deep consultation and it was decided that "Jocko" Colvin could relieve him. Yes, this wonderful pitcher of old who had so often turned defeat into victory and won many laurels for the Springfield team but he fared but little better as 19 more runs were added to the 7 making a total of 26 to 14 in favor of the Litsey league.

Haynes and Polin did the battery work for the Litsey league and performed in excellent style as Haynes showed his great twirling ability by making a large number of the visitors fan the air. His pitching was the feature of the game, he received fine support as Vanarsdale in left field made many fine catches for which he recieved much applause, as also did Crouch in center and Gregory in right field. Litsey at first was there with the goods, Hopper who can always be relied upon performed in his old time way. Litsey at short was great and pulled off many sensational plays as also did Thompson at third.

Winding Crochet Wool.

Winding wool so that the thread may be drawn from the inside of the ball is a big help to those who knit or crochet. Start your ball by winding in long loops and then wind loosely over one end, letting the other stick out like a little tuft. When you are ready to start on the ball pull gently at the tuft until it comes out of your hand and start from that end.

Guard Against Moths.

One of the best and most used remedies is that of airing and beating articles infested with moths, which in general are liable to attack only such articles as are put away and left undisturbed, for a considerable period. From now until along toward the latter part of June such articles should be placed in the sun and aired and beaten frequently.

To Remove Cream Spots.

Cream spots can easily be removed from a tablecloth without necessitating its being put away for the week by lightly touching with household ammonia. Iron the spot over a clean piece of white blotting paper.

THE BASQUES.

An Interesting People Who Are a Puzzle Among Nations.

The Basque provinces lie in the north of Spain, and, although for centuries students have tried to trace the exact origin of the people and find a key to their language, they have failed to do so.

All other known tongues spoken by the sons of men have been shown to possess a common origin, traceable to the Arabic and Semitic. But the Basque language has entirely resisted the philologist, in some aspects the wonderful shows traces of a Chinese admixture. In others it is clear that North American Indian terms are native to it. It also shows traces of barbaric languages spoken on the east coast of Africa.

The people themselves bear physiological traits found in those who speak the said tongues. The native name of Basqueland is Eskuara, and their motto is "Irurac bat," or "Three In One." Nor is their political structure anything like that of any known political body, though they belong, of course, to Spain. Each Basque province is governed by a parliament composed of representatives selected partly by election, partly by lot—among the householders of each country parish or town. Their laws are essentially peculiar to themselves and are conceived on no known code either of ancient or mediæval times. They are a puzzle among nations and number half a million all told.—New York World.

Paper Which is Waterproof.

In Japan there is a paper made which is impervious to water, being made of bamboo fibers and eucalyptus mixed with the fibers of the gampi and some other shrubs. The fibers are first torn apart, made dry, cleaned and scraped, boiled in a weak lye and thoroughly washed in water, after which they are beaten and then mixed with certain roots made into a viscous stage. A solution containing resin, caoutchouc and camphor is also added. A sort of pulp is thus formed and then made into sheets, which are run through a calendering machine heated to various temperatures. The result is that a paper is produced which is exceedingly tough, light and which may be washed. The Japanese use it for leather lunch tions and india rubber.—Pathfinder.

Northern Australia.

Australia's large northern territory has a tropical or almost an equatorial climate, and the heat is very oppressing to Europeans. Its capital, Palmerston, contains more Chinese than Caucasians. The former are the ruling race and the employers; the whites are the serfs and the employed. Large herds of buffaloes roam about the silent plains of this enormous territory, which would be a sportsman's paradise but for the wild natives, who are exceptionally fierce and treacherous and have killed a number of the hunters who came to hunt the buffaloes.

His Marathon Record.

"Colonel," asked the beautiful girl "did you ever ride a horse ninety miles in three days?"

"No," replied the veteran of two wars, "but I once ran twenty miles in about thirty minutes, which, I think, was going some, considering the fact that the underbrush was thick, and I was in so much of a hurry that I forgot to throw away a knapsack that weighed nearly fifty pounds."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Counts Up.

"My dear," he said in a mildly reproachful tone, "I have no doubt at all that you are a good bargain hunter and that you always get really good bargains, but you do get too many of them."—Chicago Post.

A BASHFUL LOVER.

The Professor Was a Shy Wooer, but Finally Got the Lady.

Dr. Holdane, at one time a professor of St. Andrews university, was a very shy man. This latter failing prevented him from asking any lady to become his wife until he was well advanced in life.

However, he plucked up courage one day, consecrated his house and went to call on the object of his affections.

The lady, seeing the doctor's embarrassment, opened fire. "Weel, doctor, hae ye got through wi' your papering and painting yet? I'm told your new carpets are just beautiful. They say the pattern o' the dining room chairs is just quite out o' the way. In short, that everything about the house is just perfect."

Here was a providential opening he was not such a goose as to overlook. He advanced his chair, edged forward her, simpering the while, raised his eyes furtively to her face and said, with a gentle inflection of his voice which no one but a willfully deaf one could have misinterpreted: "Na, na, Miss Jane, it's no quite perfect. It canna' be quite that so long as there's one thing wanting."

"And what can that be?" asked the imperturbable spinster.

Utterly thrown on his own ends by her willful blindness to his meaning, the poor doctor beat a hasty retreat, drew back his chair from its dangerous proximity, caught up his hat and in tones of blighted hope grasped forth his declaration in these words: "Eh, dear, eh! Well I'm sure! The thing wanting is a—a—a sideboard."

However, she married him after all.—London Answers.

THE WORD "FELLOW."

Its Course From the Universities Into Everyday Life.

The word bachelor means originally "cowboy," a youth who looked after the cow, from the low Latin bacca and through the classical Latin vacca. In course of time the term was given in scorn to voluntarily unwedded men by ladies who had sharp tongues. The word was taken over by the universities in the middle ages, and the degree of bachelor was not supposed to be given to any man who had entered into the state of matrimony.

The word "fellow" has had a somewhat similar fate as far as the ladies and the universities were concerned. The universities of Oxford and Cambridge, to name but two, grant fellowships worth from $1,500 to $3,000 per annum at the various colleges to unmarried honor graduates of high distinction. If a fellow should enter into matrimony he still keeps or forfeits his fellowship. As the "fellows" were generally men of apparent opulence or at least comfort in regard to living and dress, they readily attracted the attention of ladies who were thinking of settling down in life. When an acquaintanceship was formed between a "fellow" and a marriageable lady things usually went very delightfully until the fair schemer discovered the academic status of the man. Then the expression "Pooh, he is a fellow!" came very naturally to her lips. And so it crept into secular or lay life and began its unkind meaning. But, of course, if the graduate was willing to sacrifice his fellowship and its emoluments for the sake of the fair lady's lovely eyes and favors—why, he became a "good fellow," which is a horse of a totally different color.—New York World.

Experiments have shown that the Chicago air 200 feet above the street contains in a year 7,638 pounds of dirt an acre, or three times as much as London air.

The sum of $500 was paid in Paris some years ago for the door through which during the French revolution Marie Antoinette, Charlotte Corday and Danton went out to execution.

Two hunters of Bradon, Vt., while hunting along the shore of Lake Champlain found $1,000 in old English coin. The coins were discovered in the hollow of a tree and were dates from 1760 to 1779.

Austria-Hungary has the advantage of more abundant forests than most countries, its topmost area being 31½ per cent as against 25 per cent in Germany, 21 per cent in Norway, 16 per cent in France and 14 per cent in Italy.

One of the most fashionable clubs in Berlin has in its supper room a curtain made of champagne corks. Four thousand corks, with their olives or gilt covering, have been threaded on thin rods decorated with colored ribbons and embellished with small copper bells.

In Reading, Pa., there is a sideboard made of 150,000 pieces of wood, all inlaid and fitted together without show ing a single joint. Harrison Weber, the owner, was twelve years making the sideboard, which, according to the time spent and the material used, is valued at $50,000.

An arrangement of a ship's lights in a definite triangle on a known plan is urged by D. H. Shuttleworth-Brown as a safeguard against collision. The lights would then show an observer on another ship the vessel's course, her distance from the observer and her approximate speed.

The discovery of strange substance in a cave near the town of Cornilla, Mexico, leads to the belief that radium is in the composition of the interior of the cave. The inside of the cave gives off an iridescent glow constantly, and samples of the rock taken from the cave glow strongly in the dark.

The National City bank of New York is now the richest institution of its kind in volume of business transacted. Eight millions of dollars pass through the bank each day. The giant safe, which is protected by a door with forty-four locks, contains $50,000,000 in gold and $500,000,000 in first class securities.

It is announced that a remarkably interesting discovery has been made in the catacombs of Priscilla, at Rome in the form of the following inscription: "In loco loco Petrus fuit." Signor Marucchi, the eminent archæologist, is convinced, after careful study of circumstances, that the Petrus is none other than the Apostle St. Peter.

Why do one of the states belonging to Great Britain, still has Queen Victoria's head on some of its stamps. Letters thus stamped are regarded on their arrival in England as not stamped and charged double on delivery. One of the persons thus penalized asked the reason and was told that the time of grace six years after a change of sovereignty had expired.

The queen of Swaziland, in Africa, when land seen by white people was clad in a neat robe of ox hide, rather the worse for wear. To this simple garment were added bangles for her wrists and ankles. She sat on the palace floor and took snuff continually, wrapping around her shoulders an opera cloak of bright green and purple, the diplomatic gift of an English nobleman.

It is suggested that the sixteen inch gun now lying unmounted at Sandy Hook be sent to the Philippines and mounted on the fortifications now under construction at Corregidor island for the defense of Manila. This gun would command the channel there which the twelve inch gun will not do, and it can deliver a blow at a distance of 10,000 to 12,000 feet which would sink any ship afloat.

Potatoes For Dairy Cows.

It has been found by experiments that potatoes will increase the milk flow 10 per cent when added to the ration. At this rate, however, it will not pay to feed them if there is a ready market for them at 50 cents per bushel. When potatoes are a drug on the market and are worth only 30 or 25 cents per bushel it will pay to feed them if the price of grains are as quoted. Thoughtful are not excellent food for dairy cows. It is often said that the seeds have a tendency to dry up the cows, but I am inclined to doubt this.—Hugh G. Van Pelt, Iowa Agricultural College.

Selfishness.

Jones worked so hard and denied himself so much in order to pay his life insurance that he had neither the time nor the means to be sick, and he outlived all the beneficiaries, who were mean while engaged in the relatively unhealthy business of lying back and waiting for him to die. Moreover, in thinking of the matter he became convinced that he had a good deal of fun, after all—more fun, indeed, than most.

"I'm a terribly selfish fellow," exclaimed Jones guiltily.—Puck.

Have Rented Drying Plant

The prospects for Washington county to have the leading tobacco market in the State is indeed bright. The J. P. Taylor Co., of Henderson, N. C., have rented the dryer and will be in the market to buy from two to two and a half million pounds of tobacco. These people are exporters of tobacco and this is their first venture in the Burley district, having been buyers of Southern tobacco. The only places in which they will locate is at Lexington and this place. They will employ 35 hands in the drying plant.

The R. A. Reynolds Co., and a number of other independent companies will be represented on this market. We rejoice to say that Washington county judging from present prospects, will have the leading tobacco market in the State.

A Smooth Forger

Mr. Geo. Mullican one of our local grocerymen on looking over his bank pass book a few days ago, discovered that he had been made the victim of a smooth forger. There were three checks evidently torn from his business check book made payable to the order of J. C. White amounting in the aggregate to $61. One of the checks had been paid and indorsed by Mr. Woodson Moss formerly proprietor of the Walton Hotel, of this place, but now of Winchester. The other checks were cashed by Louisville parties. The forger has not yet been apprehended but Mr. Moss has informed Mr. Mullican that he had him located. Mr. Mullican informs us that White came into his store and tore the checks out while he was engaged in waiting on a customer, as about fifteen checks were missing from the back of the book.

High School Entertainment.

A large crowd assembled at the Opera House Tuesday evening to witness the commencement exercises of the pupils of the Springfield Graded School. The entertainment was entertaining from beginning to end. The recitations were rendered in true oratorical style and received much applause.

The musical program was entirely vocal, and the manner in which the selections were rendered made it plain that for melodious voices Springfield takes a first place.

The drills "The Japanese Fan" by nine little girls and "Jamie in Command" by a troop of boys were especially well received by the audience.

The pupils are highly deserving of praise for the excellent manner in which each and everyone rendered his or her part. Every year for the past six years the Graded School has given an annual commencement and that each one has been pronounced a success, and that its pupils take a first place wherever they go sufficiently demonstrates the superior ability of the teachers of the Springfield Graded School

Attempted Suicide

Clone Duncan, a son of John D. Duncan, a young man who lives near Pulliam, who until recently had been living in Spencer county, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor last week. Fortunately, however, the wound was not serious. Domestic and financial troubles together with the loss of friends are assigned as the reasons for the rash act.

Joe F. Carrico Dead.

Mr. Joe F. Carrico died at his home four miles south of Springfield early yesterday morning. About one year ago Mr. Carrico suffered a severe stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered. About two weeks ago he received another stroke which was the immediate cause of his death.

Mr. Carrico was about sixty years of age, and the son of Mr. William Carrico, who died many years ago. Early in life he was married to Miss Belle Johnson a daughter of Mr. Henry Johnson. The greater portion of his life was spent on the farm where he died. He leaves his wife and one son, Damon Carrico, of Lebanon. The funeral will take place at St. Rose this morning at 9 o,clock.

THE MIRAGE.

Conditions That Make Possible This Beautiful Illusion.

About that natural phenomenon, the mirage, much mystery clung in days of old, but science explains it as readily as the rainbow.

The fata morgana of the strait of Messina and the specter of the Brocken were nothing more in sober reality than mere mirage.

A mirage may occur at any place where the denser stratum of air is placed above the lighter stratum, thus refracting the rays of light, the common surface of the two stratums acting as a mirror.

In looming mirages distant objects show an extravagant increase in vertical height without alteration in breadth. Distant hummocks of ice are thus magnified into immense towers and pinnacles, and a ship is sometimes abnormally drawn out until it appears twelve or thirteen times as high as it is long. Rocks are seen drawn up to ten or twelve times their proper height. Houses as well as human beings and animals appear in like exaggerated shape.

Another form of mirage is when a ship or some other object near the water seems greatly elongated and a second inverted image meets it from above.

Sometimes the proper image of the object is elevated far above the sea, while the second image strangely appears inverted beneath it, the whole surrounded by a sheet of sky which is mirrored and repeated within it.

In 1822 in the arctic region Captain Scoresby recognized by its inverted image in the air his father's ship, the Fame, which afterward proved to be seventeen miles beyond the visible horizon of his observation.

One August evening in 1806 Dr. Vince saw from Ramsgate, at which place only the tops of Dover castle towers are usually visible, the whole of the castle. It appeared as though lifted up and bodily placed on the near side of the intervening hill. So perfect was this illusion that the hill itself actually could not be seen through the figure.

Some forms of mirage are lateral as well as vertical, arising from unequal density of two contiguous vertical bodies of air. Thus on Lake Geneva a boat has been seen double, the two images some distance apart.

Persons have been duplicated in the same way. Any one on a hot day by placing his eye near to a heated wall may see lateral mirages of objects at a distance and nearly on a line with the wall.

Mirages are very frequent on deserts or the large sandy plains which abound in the southwestern states and territories. Many a panting wagon train has pushed on in joyous haste at the sight of a green grove or limpid lake, only to be cruelly disappointed at the fading away of the vision. Is it any wonder that the natives and Indians regard the phenomenon as the work of evil and tantalizing spirits?

Lake Ontario is famous for beautiful and wonderful mirages, during which the opposite shore of the lake is plainly visible from either side.—Pearson's.

Court Dwarfs.

Until about little more than a century ago dwarfs were frequently kept as court toys. Records of them might be multiplied almost indefinitely.

Bebe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, lived to be ninety years of age, dying in Paris in 1858, and is variously described as having measured thirty-five inches and twenty-three inches. Julia, niece of Augustus, had two dwarfs, each twenty-eight inches in height, and Henrietta Mar two whose joint height was 8 two inches. The Empero had a dwarf named height was two feet enteen pounds. T in England was longed to the er of Geor

The Matchmaking of Bobby.

By LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1905, by Associated Literary Press.

With a smile of glorious anticipation illuminating his chubby face, Bobby trotted up the street as fast as a pair of two fat and very little legs would carry him—for he was going to see Miss Brant. Next to visiting Alice Mayling this was his greatest treat.

Richard Brant could not make amazing cookies and preserves like Miss Mayling, but he could tell stories of Indians and grizzlies and other creatures dear to the small boy's heart. Miss Mayling's stories carried romance and were about little boys who were so very good that Bobby found them extraordinarily uninteresting. Had it not been that the Mayling cakes were as good as her young heroes Bobby would not have been a frequent caller on Alice Mayling.

This afternoon as he was warming his dimpled hands before the open fire he regarded with secret awe the deft fashion in which Brant rolled himself a cigarette with one hand. Brant had been a plainsman until he had run across a mine while he was looking for stray cattle, and he could throw a rope and talk real Indian talk.

"I looked for you yesterday," said Dick Brant gravely as he sank into a chair on the opposite side of the fireplace.

"I was seeing Miss Mayling," explained Bobby. "She makes cake on Thursdays."

"And you deserted me because Miss Mayling was making cake?" cried Dick solemnly. In reality, though he used mock pathos, he was a little jealous of Miss Mayling's popularity with his little chum. Somehow Bobby seemed to Brant the most sincere friend he had made in the big eastern city.

"Cake is nice just out of the oven," explained Bobby. "She always bakes a little cake for me, and of course I have to go and eat it."

"I suppose so," assented Dick, "but I was very lonesome yesterday."

"I'm sorry," said Bobby, with prompt penitence and a troubled face. "Wouldn't it be nice," he added, "if I could go to see you and Miss Mayling at the same time? You could tell me stories and she could bake cake."

He stared into the fire, lost in rapture at the thought of this most valuable combination. Dick looked scared and blushed. He was little used to feminine society, and a suggestion like that, even from Bobby, startled him. Besides, he had been secretly studying Miss Mayling from afar.

"Then you wouldn't be lonesome any more," resumed Bobby, the vast attractions of his good idea growing on him, "not even if I didn't come and see you 'cause then you and she would have each other. But of course I would come to see you," he added quickly. "It would be awful nice."

"I guess it would," assented Dick a little absently.

"Then why don't you?" demanded Bobby, with engaging directness.

"To begin with, I don't know her," explained Dick. "You see, a man has to know a lady before he can call on her, and I've never met Miss Mayling."

When Bobby finally trotted away he was thinking deeply. It was absurd that his best man should not know Miss Mayling.

At the next lodging day at Miss Mayling's the thought was very much in mind with a denial that meant immense determination to him he obtained permission to take his small spice cake home. As soon as he was out of her sight he carried it to Brant, his fat legs speeding wonderfully.

"Ain't it fine?" he demanded eagerly when he had entered Brant's room for the last spicy morsel, not without envy that almost assumed a poignant degree.

"Fine, great," admitted Brant, with enforced enthusiasm. "I tell you, Bobby, the woman who made that cake is a wonder of a cook."

Bobby learned his professional satisfaction. "I thought you'd like it," he said confidently. "She makes nicer cakes than that sometimes. I'll bring you another when she makes fruit cake."

"Don't do it," advised Brant smilingly. "If the fruit cake is as good as this I'm liable to shoot her and force her to take cake for me for the rest of her life."

"What's a'duct?" demanded Bobby. When the word had been explained to him he wrinkled his pudgy brows. But if another deep idea had come to him, as that contortion would seem to denote, it remained a secret in his fat breast. "Give us an Indian story," he demanded.

"All right, son," said Dick as he stretched himself out in his easy chair and prepared to entertain his small guest with the story of how Chief Spotted Panther carried off his Indian bride from the camp of a hostile tribe.

He was unusually graphic in his story telling, for as he went on he began to imagine that he was Spotted Panther and Miss Mayling was the Indian maid. Thus sadly had the unprincipled suggestions of the scheming Bobby contaminated Dick Brant's good manners. But it must be admitted in his favor that it was not the cake, but the memory of her womanly sweetness, that fired the thoughts and lent eloquence to his tongue.

It was a deeply impressed small boy who climbed down off the chair arm when the tale was done and regretfully announced that he would have to be going home. The very next day he went to visit Miss Mayling with the most peremptory request that she bake him a fruit cake.

"Going to have a tea party, Bobby?" she asked gayly. But Bobby shook his head solemnly and declined to be drawn into trivial conversation.

"I want it for some one—some one who—it can't get nice cake," he concluded at last, examining Miss Mayling shrewdly as he spoke.

"If you don't tell me how it is I won't bake it for you," she teased, anticipating the revelation of some new love affair. Bobby was as popular as he was fickle, and Miss Mayling, hardened by experience with the young man, supposed that only the power of love could have induced him to forego the eating of her cake the day before.

"Have I got to?" he asked anxiously, fearful that a premature explanation might destroy the success of the abduction.

"Certainly," insisted Miss Mayling. Bobby was dismayed. But the cake must be secured at all hazards.

"It's for Mr. Brant," he explained. "He said if you baked him a fruit cake he'd come with his pony and hit all the chiefs on the head with a tomahawk and carry you off and make you bake cake for him all the rest of your life. You'll have to live in a tent and cook with hot stones instead of a gas range, and—and—anyhow, he says he'll do it if you tempt him with fruit cake."

Miss Mayling leaned over and kissed the earnest little face.

"I think," she said softly, "that I'll bake two little cakes next week, Bobby, so that you and your friend shall each have one."

Bobby looked into the serene face, into which there had crept something he had never seen there before—a tender curve to the even lips, a new light in the brown eyes that made them glow and sparkle and flim with tears by turns.

He had always thought Miss Mayling almost as pretty as his mother, but now he was disloyal for a moment and thought she was more beautiful than anybody he had ever seen.

His moist little fingers clasped her slim, cool hand, and he looked up into her starry eyes.

"I wish I was big enough to 'duct you," he said curiously. "I bet Mr. Brant wouldn't get that cake."

Alice Mayling bent over and pinched his chubby cheeks.

"Bobby, my dear, you remind me of a certain little god without whose aid Lochinvar himself would have failed."

And then she looked up suddenly to see passing her window a tall, straight figure, with his glance firmly fixed ahead.

"Of course he wouldn't be so ordinary as to stare in here," she said softly. "But he's the sort who'll find a way—and I don't think I'll make it very hard for him."

Bobby cuddled closer to her soft, silken frock.

"What makes grownups say things that don't tell anything?" he demanded. But she did not answer.

Intoxicating Drinks.

"We have 6,000 intoxicating drinks in America," said a temperance lecturer. "That, I believe, is the record.

"Expert as our metropolitan bartenders are, they have none of them mastered the entire American drink question, and they would throw up their wet hands if a man asked for a bak-to-mu-shlo, a cassaba, a sam, a larangina or even a mescal.

"You see, all the races that compose America introduce here the drinks of their old homes. Bak-no-mu-shlo is an oriental cordials, sweet and perfumed and nasty, that our soldiers and sailors learned to like in the Philippines.

"A larangina is a slightly acid drink from South America. It is a mixture of the leaves, flowers and fruit of tropical plants—orange, banana, lime, pineapple, lemon, chocolate, mangosava, tamarind and I don't know what.

"Mescal is a Mexican abomination made of the cactus. It goes down like a bunch of cactus thorns.

"A cassaba is a powerful sugar cane rum that the Jamaicans distil illicitly. Fifteen cents you can buy a pint, though half a pint is quite sufficient."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Queer Fish.

In European fresh water is to be found a very large silurioid known as the wels. Its head is large, broad and depressed, fully as long as the trunk itself, while the tail is compressed and longer than the head and trunk together. The entire fish is destitute of scales and covered with a smooth, slippery skin like an eel. The mouth is very short, the mouth broad, with the lower jaw longer and very extensible. There are six barbels around the mouth, two of which, situated on each side of the upper jaw before the eye, are very long, extending nearly to the tail. The other four are much shorter and arranged in pairs on the chin. Owing to its poor eyesight and sluggish movements the wels would be badly handicapped in the race of life if not for these barbels, especially those of the upper jaw, which can be moved voluntarily in every direction. In moving leisurely about the fish uses them constantly in feeling its way, and at the same time they serve to attract other fishes, which mistake them for worms. When the wels perceives its prey close enough to be seized it makes a dart and rarely fails to capture it.—New York Tribune.

Too Bad.

"Some men have a good start in life."

"Very true."

"It is different with me, however."

"How different?"

"Mine was a stop."

Punches Bag For Fifteen Hours.

Arthur Lancaster, who last year at the Olympic palace, London, swung a blacksmith's hammer for twelve hours, a world's record, is slowly but surely creating a trust in record feats demanding strength. Recently he punched a ball weighing nearly two pounds for fifteen hours without cessation. Lancaster struck the ball so fewer than 100,000 times, and, although the appalling monotony of the thing was relieved occasionally by the playing of waltzes and marches on the piano forte, but many of the spectators would back out for more than half an hour.

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

WOMAN AND FASHION

Sleeveless Coat For Little Girl.

The sleeveless coat is quite the thing for grownups, and the question is whether it is a practical garment for a child, but the youngsters will be in fashion, and a coat of this description is easily packed away in bag or hamper to slip on in an emergency while on an outing or short trip. The sketch shows such a coat of natural colored pongee. It is cut out round at the neck, and the armholes are wide and roomy. The body part of the coat is lined with white china silk. The coat fastens down the left side of the front with buttons covered with pongee. Rows of stitching extend around neck, arms, down the fronts, around the hem, and form a girdle at the waist. The hat is of dark blue chip, trimmed with a scarf and big bow at the side.

Crochet Beadings.

Irish crochet beadings, insertions and medallions are prominent on the more elaborate crape blouses, some of which have a wide band of the lace insertion down the center of the front and narrower bands on either side. Such blouses fasten in the back with Irish crochet buttons. Another model is narrowly box plaited across the entire front and back and cut out at the neck to show an all over Irish crochet guimpe and collar. The underparts of the long sleeves are laid in tiny box plaits, while the uppers consist of a wide, straight band, beginning at the edge of the yoke, extending over the arm tops and thence to the wrists. These bands, their terminating cuff and the cut-out neck are edged with Irish crochet beading or with narrow insertion. The effect on white crape is charming, but rather less striking than when placed on some delicate shade of pink, blue or mauve.

For the Needleworker.

Among the novel conveniences at the notion counter are several that will be of interest to the needleworker. Now that English eyelet is so much favored as a decoration a stiletto is necessary. An improved article making perfect eyelets is only 25 cents, so that no embroiderer need use the point of her scissors and probably spoil the work because she cannot buy a stiletto. Sewing chatelaines, supporting tiny scissors, a needlebook and an emery are only 50 cents, and a complete glove mender can be bought for 50 cents. A nickel holder, taking twelve spools of cotton, is 25 cents.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Turkey's New Sultan.

Mohammed Rechad Effendi, the new sultan of Turkey, who succeeded Abdul Hamid II. on the throne, is a younger brother of the deposed monarch. He is the thirty-fifth sultan since the foundation of the Ottoman empire and the twenty-ninth since the conquest of Constantinople in 1453. Rechad was born in Constantinople Nov. 3, 1844. He has four children, the Princes Zia-Eddine Effendi, born in 1871; Nedjm-Eddine Effendi, born in 1881; Eumer-Hilmi Effendi, born on Feb. 18, 1883, and the Princess Refia, born in 1887.

The new sultan has been practically a prisoner since Abdul Hamid ascended the throne in 1876 and was held under close guard in a pavilion in the Yildiz kiosk. After the revolution of July, 1908, he received a measure of freedom and was sometimes seen driving about the streets of Constantinople in a closed carriage. It is said that he has been something of a student and is well educated in Turkish literature, but has had no practical experience in government or diplomacy. Mohammed V. has held an honorary title of general in the Turkish army, but has never been in any way connected with practical affairs.

Gorky and His Admirers.

Maxim Gorky, the novelist, has had many narrow escapes from death. Some time ago a friend asked him why he did not take care of himself. "I cannot bother to take care of myself," he replied. "Is life worth living if we have to be forever thinking of health and trembling at the least wind? I imagine not." This author, who was so hurt at his reception in America, has no fear of offending any one. Once he went into the theater at Moscow and the audience got to its feet and began to cheer as soon as it recognized him. They called for a speech, and Gorky answered them in this fashion: "What on earth are you staring at me for? I am not a dancing girl or the Venus of Milo or a drunkard just pulled out of the water. I write stories. They have the luck to please you, and I am glad of it, but that is no reason why you should keep on staring. We have come here to see a charming play. Be good enough to attend to it and let me alone."

A Game of Numbers.

Next time your friends come to see you write out these questions and see how many can write down the correct answers:

1. What two numbers multiplied together will produce seven?
2. How may four fives be placed so as to make six and a half?
3. If five times four are thirty-three, what will the fourth of twenty be?
4. What is the difference between twice twenty-five and twice five and twenty?
5. Divide the number fifty into two such parts that if the greater part be divided by seven and the less by three the quotient in each case will be the same.
6. If you have a piece of cloth containing fifty yards and wish to cut it into fifty one-yard pieces, how many days will it take you to do it if you cut one yard a day?

Answers:

1. The numbers are seven and one.
2. The figure five, the fraction five-fifths and the decimal fraction five-tenths.
3. Eight and one-fourth.
4. Twice twenty-five are fifty; twice five and twenty are thirty.
5. The two parts are thirty-five and fifteen.
6. Forty-nine days, not fifty days.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Guessing Match.

Place on a table a number of articles of various size, length, weight, quantity, age and dimension. Distribute pencils and papers and invite the company to view the display and to write down their guesses as to the various details in connection with the objects. The players may be allowed to handle and otherwise examine the articles, a list of which should be distinctly numbered and the guesses written beside numbers corresponding to those on the objects.

The details about the articles may be ascertained beforehand if desired or tested after the papers have been collected, the latter affording much sport as the proofs are demonstrated. The best guesser, of course, wins the prize if one is offered.

The following articles are offered as suggestions, but available objects may be used in their stead: 1, number of beans in a glass; 2, weight of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary; 3, length of a ball of twine; 4, number of sheets of paper in a small pad; 5, height of a pole; 6, number of seeds in an orange; 7, quantity of water in a pail; 8, number of pins in a pincushion; 9, age of a baby (from photograph).

Badminton.

This play is a mixture of tennis and battledoor and may be played in a court or hall, out of doors or in or on a tennis court. It is played with a tennis net or one even smaller than that which does not quite reach the ground. Shuttlecocks are used instead of balls.

The rules of tennis are followed with slight changes owing to the character of the shuttlecock, which does not bounce like the tennis ball. "All the hits must be made on the fly. The player must not touch the net either with racket or clothing, nor must he touch the shuttlecock with his hands after the first service. The points are counted just as in tennis.

A Funny Dancing Toy.

A funny little dancer and a very pleasing toy for baby sister can be easily made of cork. Carve with a pocketknife a funny head at the top end of the cork and color it to suit baby's taste. At the other end stick in four or more hog's bristles of equal length, so that the figure will stand erect thereon. Put a little lace cap on the dancer's head and cover the body and bristles with a silk ruffle decorated with frills. Now Carmencita is ready for the dance. Place her on a table and tattoo lightly on the table with your fingers, and she will dance most gracefully, much to baby's delight.

Tibetan Etiquette.

One of the queerest salutations in the world is that of the natives of Tibet. When two inhabitants of this isolated, mountainous country of central Asia meet, each takes off his hat, puts out his tongue and scratches his right ear. These actions are performed simultaneously. The whole performance is analogous to our simple custom, on meeting of nodding the head and saying, "How do you do?"

A Spider's Appetite.

The spider has a tremendous appetite, and his eating defies all human competition. A scientist who carefully noted a spider's consumption of food in twenty-four hours concluded that if the spider were built on the same scale as a full grown man he would eat at daybreak a small alligator, by 7 a. m. a lamb, by 9 a. m. a calf, by 1 o'clock a sheep and would finish up with a huge meat pie.

New Head of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Illinois, the new president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, for a number of years has been one of the leading members of the society and prior to her recent elevation served on the national board as vice president general from her state. She is the widow of a coal mine owner and resides at Bloomington, where she has a fine residence and is highly esteemed.

Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, a past president of the society, is her sister. Mrs. Charles S. Bromwell, wife of Colonel

MRS. MATTHEW T. SCOTT.

Bromwell, until recently major domo at the White House, and Mrs. Carl Vrooman, whose husband is the traveler and writer, are her daughters.

Mrs. Scott's ancestry is notable on both sides. She traces her descent on the father's side to Augustine Warner, who was the great-grandfather of George Washington, first president of the United States. Her mother was a descendant of the Greed family, which was prominent both in Virginia and Kentucky.

Fits Record.

"Before I consent to let you have my daughter," said the grim old gentleman, "there are some questions I would like to ask you. Are you quick tempered?"

"Well, yes, to tell the truth, I'm afraid I am."

"Hum! Ever swear?"

"Sometimes, when I become very angry, I do."

"Smoke?"

"Yes. But I have never noticed that it injured me."

"Ever drink intoxicating liquors?"

"I occasionally take a drink, but I'm not a slave to the habit, I assure you."

"Have you ever been in jail?"

"Once. I took some things for which I had no right, but I did not do it deliberately, I assure you. It was the result of a misunderstanding."

"Yes, I guess that is. How about your family? What kind of ancestors did you have?"

"Do you think it is fair to hold a man responsible for what his ancestors did?"

"Answer my question."

"Well, I can't say that my ancestors amounted to a great deal. My grandfather was—was—in short, he was hanged."

"You've never held a job anywhere very long, have you?"

"I can't say that I have."

"What was the highest salary you ever earned?"

"Nineteen dollars a week."

"Have you ever rocked a boat?"

"No, sir, never."

"All right, you can have her."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Missed His Opportunity.

A prominent Bellevue man was formerly chief of a volunteer fire department in a small town in Allegheny county and never failed to "run with the machine." Nowadays he is an important factor in a large organization but has never lost his desire to be one of the first at a fire. When he hears the alarm ring he can name at once the location of the box, and if it is near he dashes out of the office at a ten second gait. But he is heartbroken now. He entered the office the other morning with downcast looks. Sympathetic questioning brought out this story:

"I got up late today, and when I went down to breakfast everything was quiet. I asked the girl what was wrong, and she took me out into the kitchen. The woodwork was charred, the windows broken and the floor flooded with water. 'When did this happen?' I inquired. 'About an hour ago,' the girl replied. 'Were the firemen here?' 'Why, of course. Didn't you hear them?'

"Now, what do you think of that? I've run thousands of miles to fires and slept through one in my own house. But I fixed the girl for not turning an alarm into my bedroom."—Pittsburg Gazette.

Eat What

You want of the food you need

Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly.

When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.
